COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

Some of the dirt roads that got pretty rough during the dry spell were scraped last week and the first part of this week. The town of Andover wants to hire the grader for two or three days the last part of this week or the first of next week. The parking lines on the streets are being painted. This work should have been done earlier but there was a possibility that some repairs might be made on Main Street this year. Main Street is very rough and should be re-surfaced but the job could not be done this year.

Mrs. Blake attended the Tax Collector's School in Augusta on Tuesday. The morning portion of the program was devoted to Tax Lien Mortgage Procedure. The subjects for the afternoon were excise tax on commercial vehicles, foreign cars and house trailers.

There is only one active welfare case in town at the present time and this case will be taken care of as soon as disability payments start. There are four active welfare cases that live in other towns that still have a settlement with the town of Bethel. One case involves just medicine and the others just food. The situation is much better than it was last spring when there were between eight and twelve active cases and one was a family that lives in another town and there were eleven members in the family. Fortunately that case is no longer active.

Mollyockett Day, Aug. 3: History of Event Recalled--Announce Plans

One hundred eighty-two years ago August 3rd, marks the anniversary of the last Indian Raid in Bethel; and also is the day Bethel celebrates her annual Mollyockett Day Bazaar, sponsored by the Bethel Health and Service Council.

In 1949 a group of Bethel citizens planned an all day parade, auction and money making booths with the idea that all proceeds from the day would go to families in need of financial help, due to sickness or misfortune; this being a time when a local family was in need of help, when due to an accident a mother was critically injured.

All of the community worked hard and enthusiastically to make this event a prosperous one, with the faint idea that perhaps Bethel would carry this project on as an annual event.

The American Legion sponsored and administered this first bazaar which netted $1,600, 30 booths offered everything from flowers to hamburgers, 75 youngsters participated in the parade. From this successful event stemmed the annual Bethel Community Welfare Bazaar and Street Dance, and has become Bethel's most important charitable event during the summer season.

July 27, 1957, the Bethel Health and Service Council unanimously decided to develop a bit of Bethel's own folk lore through the character of Mollyockett, the famed Indian "doctor" in this area during the 18th century. Sponsored for the benefit of the Bethel Health and Service Council, Mollyockett Day is fittingly named since Mollyockett, an Indian princess, is best remembered as the first "healer" of that era.

The main project for the Bethel Health and Service Council in 1962 was sponsoring a Dental Clinic, which included a sodium fluoride application program. Other projects worthy of mention were the very successful Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine Clinic, Sight project, holiday baskets. The Health Council also has an adequate loan closet, which includes five wheelchairs, two hospital beds, a walker, crutches and other equipment ready for use when needed. A used clothing supply is also available as an important part of service of the Health Council.

Arrangements for 1963 Mollyockett Day are nearly completed and festivities for August 3, on the Bethel Common promise events to delight all ages. A complete fun-packed day awaits you, so come early and stay late. All proceeds from this festive annual bazaar will be used by the Bethel Health and Service Council.

Field Day events at 9 A. M. will start the day off with a bang!! Youngsters from six to teen-age will participate in greased poles, bag races, relay races and other activities.

The booths open for the day at 10 A. M. — food, candy, hot dogs, soft drinks, pop corn, papoose reservation, pony rides, continued on Page Four

EAST BETHEL CEMETERY SEEKS MAINTENANCE FUNDS

For a number of years those interested in the East Bethel Cemetery have been concerned with its future maintenance. Each spring at the annual meeting a clean-up day has been set, at which time local people have gathered to rake and clean up the cemetery.

During the summer only endowed lots have money for maintenance. There are many lots that have no provisions for care. Only nine lots are so endowed. Over the years, there has been accumulated a fund of only $678.29 to care for the remainder of the cemetery. One can readily see how hopelessly inadequate the income from this fund, last year only $28.13, is to accomplish the job.

In June of 1962 Alder River Grange held a public supper at which time $24 was turned over to the general fund of the cemetery. The girls' 4-H club at East Bethel cleaned and painted the cemetery fence. Thus interested organizations and individuals have helped to maintain the cemetery as best they could. There are many people whose relatives and ancestors are buried here. With the thought of obtaining financial assistance from some of these people, it was voted at the annual meeting last spring to ask Eva Bean to contact as many as possible, asking for contributions to build a fund, the income from which would be sufficient to insure proper care of the cemetery. She has carried out her assignment, but the response has been disappointing. As a result of her correspondence only $100 has been received to date and this from the H. Edson Bartlett heirs. There have been other promises provided the drive proved successful. Promises, however, bear no interest.

It is hoped that funds for this worthy cause will be forthcoming. Checks should be made to the East Bethel Cemetery Association.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS
CONGRESSMAN
EDWARD C. MOORE
MAINE, SECOND DISTRICT

The House Committee on Ways and Means is still working hard at shaping up a tax bill starting to get such a warm reception for consideration by the House of Representatives sometime in August. To date, all the work that the Committee has done relates to reforms or changes in existing laws. Nothing has been done with respect to downward adjustments in the tax schedules. It is expected, however, that the Committee will include in its tax bill a gradual reduction of individual income tax rates to a range of 14 to 65 percent, from the present range of 20 to 91 percent—also a reduction of corporation tax rates to 47 per cent from the present 52 per cent.

Many of the tax reforms recommended by the President have either been rejected or modified by the Committee. Mr. Kennedy's recommendations would have, for instance, resulted in a tax take of about $3.2 billion, while the adjustments accepted by the Committee are expected to bring in only about one-third of this amount.

I am particularly pleased to observe that the Ways and Means Committee tentatively has accepted a feature which would extend to elderly persons a tax advantage on the sale of their homes. I had introduced separate legislation of a similar nature to the Congress hoping, as has happened, that this senior citizen tax benefit would be included in the big tax bill.

Under this provision, a person who was age 65 or over and who had occupied a home for five years could sell his home and pay no capital gains tax on the gain attributable to the first $20,000 of the sales price.

The senior citizen would, however, be permitted this advantage only on one such sale in his lifetime. This adjustment in the tax law would prove a big benefit to our elder citizens, and I certainly hope that it is made part of any tax bill passed by Congress.

President Kennedy has recommended the elimination of capital gain tax benefits presently in effect on timberland sales, and this has brought strong opposition from the lumber industry. Early this year I submitted testimony to the Ways and Means Committee against this recommendation, for it would present hardships to our Maine lumber industry. I am pleased to note that the Committee has disregarded this recommended change and is leaving this particular aspect of the law unchanged.

The President had also recommended a 5 percent floor on itemized deductions for income tax purposes; i. e., limit the deduction for itemized deductions to the aggregate amount in excess of 5% of adjusted gross income. The Committee has not accepted this recommendation and, instead, will disallow deductions on the following: state and local taxes on gasoline, cigarettes, alcoholic beverages, license fees on motor vehicles and operator's permits, poll taxes, and miscellaneous selective sales taxes such as admission taxes, occupancy or transfer taxes.

Mr. Kennedy's proposed repeal of the provision allowing stockholders to exclude from taxable income the first $50 of dividend income and to subtract from tax payments 4 percent of dividend income above the exclusion has also been rejected by the Committee.

should all become better acquainted with our State and local laws. Many people with whom we have talked, have thought there was a law concerning this, but there isn't. Local authorities checked, and state that there is no law saying that any of us cannot go out and "bang-away", as long as we don't injure or kill someone.

Now, we ask you—is it a comfortable feeling to think that someone can shoot toward your home at free will?

If you have any bird-hunters nearby—beware!

As soon as we are presented with the opportunity, let's vote for a law prohibiting the use of firearms within village limits. Let's stop thinking we are protected and make sure.

Meanwhile, until there is such a law, we must assert our God-given values, such as good judgment, common sense and consideration of our neighbors.

Who hasn't, at sometime, been peevish at birds, cats, dogs, etc., raising Cain with a garden? But, if we all lost our heads and started shooting, we would be living in our own little Dodge City.

Our thanks to those who have searched for the law most of us

U. OF M. EXTENSION OFFERS SUGGESTIONS ON TREE CARE

Now that spring is here, many Maine homeowners are wondering what happened to their trees during the winter.

The most prevalent injuries from last winter's heavy snows and cold winds have been branch and limb damage and winter browning or burning, explains Lewis P. Bissell, forestry specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Maine.

For injured branches and limbs, Bissell advises pruning them back to the main trunk.

If the branches are less than one inch in diameter, they need no treatment after cutting, he says. Evergreens provide their own first-aid—the pitch forms an antiseptic dressing and no other treatment is needed.

With hardwoods, treat large believed existed and our urgent plea for the early adoption of one, we are—pruning wounds with a commercial tree paint available from hardware and feed stores.

Bissell cautions against using house paint to treat wounds because the oils can cause injuries.

A combination of winter conditions were responsible for the browning of many evergreens, he points out. The sun warmed needles to the point where they started to grow and cold winds helped to dry them out.

But since the ground was frozen, the trees were unable to replace water given off by the needles, which caused the burning effect.

The only way to prevent browning is to prepare wind and sunbreaks for your trees next winter, he says. It is too late to do anything now.

Another form of browning is caused by mites. To distinguish between the two, tap the branches over a piece of white paper. If mites are present, they will drop onto the paper.

To treat your trees for mites, Bissell advises spraying them with malathion two or three times during the growing season.

chairs would provide at least a six per cent return on the investment.

It would be good for the economy of the nation in stimulating the separation of dollars from individual ownership. And while giving the economy a lift, the corporate management could enjoy the intangible satisfaction of knowing that through porches and rocking chairs, it was promoting a calmer tempo in living that would encourage a more healthful social order.

TODAY'S meditation

Thursday, July 25

Read Luke 15:1-10

I say unto you, there is a joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth. (Luke 15:10.)

We sing when we are happy. Where there is joy, there is bound to be a song. God's Word abounds with joyous songs.

We recall the song of Moses after the Red Sea deliverance, and the song of Deborah at the overthrow of Sisera. We enjoy the lovely songs of David, the wonderful chorus of the shepherds heard over the fields of Bethlehem, and the grand hallelujah anthem in the Book of Revelation.

But the most joyous of all songs is the one the angels sing when you and I come to the cross and have our sins forgiven.

As Jesus tells us, "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." No mortal ear has heard this song; but someday, by the gift of His grace, we shall join in it. It is one of many blessings that God has prepared for them that love Him.

PRAYER: We thank Thee, O God, for the joy we find in Thy Word. We come to Thee to help us so to live this life that we shall be able to join the triumphant chorus of the redeemed around Thy throne in glory. We ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor and Townspeople:

Food for Thought

We had an experience at our home on Mechanic Street last Thursday, which was frightening at the time, but it became more so as we thought about it afterward.

How slack we are—overlooking the need for written laws covering some incidents! We have written laws for even trivial things! Money speaks for some, but usually for the slightest misbehaving, the one responsible is subject to punishment, fine, or at least a warning, and his offense is made public in the newspapers.

We wonder how many of you realize that according to our present local laws, any of us can legally use a firearm within a congested, residential area! We were amazed and could hardly believe that within village limits, this is permissible. This seems ridiculous when one considers that there is even a ban on fireworks! Which is more dangerous?

Any of us can shoot, but could any of us get by with it? No, and most of us wouldn't dare try. Common sense would tell us not to.

Last Thursday, a bullet came thru the downstairs dining-room window—shattering glass about 15 mo. old Douglas Webster. His mother was also in the room and near the window. Three other small children were playing on the front porch—about 4 ft. from line of fire.

First thoughts were that some youngster or teenager had fired the shot, but how surprised we were, to find that the shot had been intended for birds in the garden of one of our prominent, responsible citizens on Main St. Of course, it was accidental, and nothing other than a broken screen and window resulted.

However, it's what could have happened that should make us all think. Perhaps we

COUNTRY FLAVOR STORE PORCHES

Now that we are regulated in so many areas of living, it does not seem unreasonable to propose that the Congress consider the subject of store porches. There are citizens who will probably agree that Congressional consideration of this topic is as important as some subjects that generate warmth and wind in the lawmakers' halls.

It is difficult to understand in this era of image, status, and consumer wooing why Big Business has not discussed the potential of store porches. We salute the super-markets and colossal shopping centers for what they have accomplished to date.

It is good to have so many services available in one spot. But if management provides nurseries, banking, swimming pools, music, zoos, motorized shopping carts, free samples of cheese spreads, beauty experts and a flower for a man's button hole, why do they not provide a porch with comfortable rocking chairs?

Consider the business-generating possibilities. More and more men accompany their wives on shopping trips these days. If a man could sit and rook and smoke his pipe, his wife would feel under no pressure to hurry the shopping. She could wander up and down the aisles and the full import of "impulse buying" would take effect. We believe rocking

10 MAINE COUNTIES IN

NATION'S TOP HUNDRED

Ten of Maine's 16 counties are listed among the top 100 agricultural counties in the United States, according to a recent census of agriculture report.

Austin E. Bennett, agricultural business specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Maine, says that the farm products leading to the high ranking were chickens, eggs, apples, potatoes, green peas and snap beans.

With few exceptions, said Bennett, the Maine counties moved to higher positions than they held in 1954. Aroostook County held its rank as highest in both acreage and bushels of potatoes harvested.

Penobscot County was 46th in potatoes harvested, and Aroostook placed 14th in green peas harvested.

More Maine counties reached the top 100 in poultry production than in any other categories. The rankings of counties qualifying through value of poultry and poultry products sold were: Waldo, 20; Kennebec, 24; Cumberland, 58; Knox, 60; Penobscot, 80; York, 90; and Androscoggin, 91.

Holding their rankings with the value of chickens sold were Waldo, 12; Kennebec, 19; Penobscot, 46; Cumberland, 51; Androscoggin, 60; and Somerset, 68. The value of eggs sold brought Kennebec, 19; Waldo, 27; Knox, 32; and Cumberland, 41, into the top ranks.

Somerset County ranked 94th in acreage of snap beans harvested for sale.

Four counties were listed among the top 100 in bushels of apples harvested: York 49; An-

10 YEARS FLUORIDATION

SUCCESSFUL IN NORWAY

According to a statement issued recently by the State Department of Health and Welfare, 10 years of fluoridated water in Norway has reduced dental decay 55% and produced three times as many elementary and junior high pupils with mouths that show no signs of ever having had any decay.

These are conclusions drawn from a survey of Norway school children. One hundred fifty-five of whom (ages 5 to 14 inclusive) had lived in Norway all their lives and had the fluoridated water both at home and at school since their births or it became available.

Carrying the analysis further:

1. 14 percent of their erupted permanent teeth had decayed, in contrast to 38 percent for the same age-group in 1952.

2. 59 percent of the pupils had any decay in their permanent teeth as compared to 90 percent in 1952.

3. 25 percent of the first teeth remaining in the mouths of 114 children had decayed in comparison to 48 percent in 1952.

4. 2.5 permanent teeth per child had decayed instead of 5.3 per child in 1952.

Androscoggin, 61; Kennebec, 65; and Oxford, 75.

It appears that Maine farmers are doing a better job of production than some other areas as Maine counties in nearly every case ranked higher in value or yield of product than in size of the resource.

Lancaster & Kilkenny Railway Co., Kilkenny Lumber Co. Railway, or the Kilkenny Railroad (1887-1897)

It was a cold last day of January in 1890 when the four-wheeled shifter "Triton", of the Concord R. R., was performing substitute duty hauling log trains from Willard Basin to Lancaster, New Hampshire, for the Lancaster & Kilkenny R. R. "Triton" was only a year old and had spent most of its short life shunting cars in the Concord yards when the regular Kilkenny line engine, the "Mt. Washington", blew a cylinder-head 10 miles east of Coos Junction and had to be sent to the shop. Being the best available

New Hampshire are cutting out trees along the light line and chopping them up. The state road crews are making extensive repairs on Route 26 and on Mill Street, widening and scraping the roads.

Charles Heywood had his big boat, the Umbagog Queen, brought up from Bethel and put into Lake Umbagog for use this summer.

engine at the time, "Triton" was assigned its first backwoods job.

This was "Triton's" last and most memorable assignment. Its engineer was one of the Concord line's most trusted ones, familiar with what the "Triton" could do but not with the Kilkenny R. R. and its tricky right of way down from Round Mountain. Partway to Lancaster a pin between the fourth and fifth sets of log-lengths broke. "Triton" and the head sets of log-loaded trucks, unaware of the break behind, picked up excessive speed and sailed into and off a curve, killing engineer Leonard Crouch. Logging had added another notch to its record.

This tragedy well illustrates one instance of the interweaving of the fortunes of some of New Hampshire's logging railroads with those of the major rail carriers. The Lancaster & Kilkenny Railway Co. was incorporated in 1879 to run a lumber road from a point near Coos Junction, on the Northern outskirt of Lancaster, to the forks of Garland Brook, near the base of Round Mountain in Kilkenny, a total distance of about 10 miles. Its original (and later) owners were primarily citizens of Lancaster and Littleton, with their main interests in lumber and sawmills in those growing communities.

Their later interests included being stockholders in the northward-moving Whitefield & Jefferson R. R., later part of the Concord R. R. and ultimately a part of the present Boston & Maine system. It wasn't until 1887 and 1888 that the 10-mile right of way was completed by the Boston & Lowell R. R. for well over $72,000. By this time the corporate name had changed to the Kilkenny Lumber Co. Railway.

Most of the first cuttings from the lower slopes of the Pilot Range were taken to Frank Smith's mill in Lancaster or to the Lancaster Paper Mill on Israel River. A couple of years later Littleton interests took over and sent the bulk of the logs to the Littleton Lumber Co. In this way the Concord R.R. received freight receipts from the logs, as well as from the finished lumber taken off to city markets. As illustrated by the circumstances surrounding Crouch's death, much of the equipment on this line was leased from other carriers. The operations were carried on from fall until the spring thaws softened the road-bed to the point of danger. This enabled the lesser railroad to rent engines that in summer carried tourists from Fabyan to the Base Station or were normally yard-switchers. Whether such engines were suitable for the requirements of a steep and winding logging railroad was a good question which was asked by the New Hampshire Railroad Commissioners in their report on the demise of the "Triton" and its faithful engineer.

The area involved in the operations of this line was the west slopes of the Pilot Range south of Lost Nation and the northern and western sides of the Starr King Range—not a large area compared to those of most other lumber roads of this period, but nonetheless one containing a fine softwood growth not seen today. By 1893 the intensive cuttings had removed most of the good timber and the owners, in looking for new forests, started pointing farther east to the virgin wilderness of the Upper Ammonoosuc.

The corporate name was then changed to the Upper Ammonoosuc Railway Co.

Already other lumber interests were constructing the Ammonoosuc R.R. into York Pond from West Milan. Could the successful operators of the Kilkenny line be blamed if they dreamed of bringing this area's eastern wealth out from their railroad at the base of Round Mountain in Willard Basin? This question is easily answered by a look at a contour map to see what costly construction would be involved, to say nothing of the practically impossible haul of log trains upgrade from the east to the height of land in Willard Notch, through which their line would have to go. By 1897 this dream had evaporated and all rails on the Kilkenny line had been torn up. The sound of steam engines on the run into Willard Basin was muted forever. The verdant farms of Lost Nation settled down to a quieter tomorrow.
